Give An Account of Thy Stewardship

An understanding of faithful stewardship is an important part of growing in Christ. Interestingly, Jesus speaks of the behavior of an unjust steward in the gospel of Luke (Luke 16:1-13). He proceeds to teach us several lessons based on the illustration of the unjust steward.

First, we should notice stewards face accountability for their work. A question arose as to the faithfulness of the unjust steward. The rich man for whom the unjust steward worked said to him, "give an account of thy stewardship."

Likewise, one day we must give account of our stewardship before God. He has entrusted to us certain privileges accompanied by a measure of wealth. We face the responsibility of faithfully handling what God places in our hands in as much as he is the owner of all we have.

Acknowledging God's ownership of our wealth prepares us for faithful stewardship. Armed with that understanding, we should proceed to manage his blessings in such a way that covetousness is avoided.

God's supply in our lives provides for our needs and equips us to be rich in good works. Keep an eye on your stewardship before God. We all must give account, thus we should be motivated to use God's supply in our lives for his glory. Amen!
